Project for canyon's north rim moves forward

TWIN FALLS - Recreationists met with North Rim Project planners Saturday, who are designing a park on the north rim of the Snake River Canyon east of U.S. Highway 93.

The:8,000-acre park site, located between the canyon and Interstate 84, would organize existing recreation uses, said Kevin Preister, anthropologist for James Kent Associates of Colorado.

Preister is one of several consultants hired by the South Central Idaho Tourism and Recreation

Development Association which is heading the planning effort.

The tourism association is paying for the consultants with a $59,000 grant from the Environmental Agency and $25,000 from Idaho Power Co., said Neil Kine Jeurism association president.
The association is a nonproject, King said.
Planners held an open house Saturday to hear ideas on the park from the community.

"The main thing is that they didn't want the north rim to look

People also wanted existing land said.

Some people who used to ride horses on the north rim now ride elsewhere because of people shooting guns in the area, Preister said.

Shooting Runs in the area, Preister said.

The park will organize recreation uses to minimize conflict, said Ann Moss, lead landscape designer for Shapins Associates of Colorado, which is doing the landscape design. A shooting range might be built, along with trails, canyon overlooks and picnic sites, she said.

"This will definitely be a wilderness park," Moss said.
"Facility development will be minimal. It will still be a desert."

Besides organizing recreation uses, the park would help protect the aquifer lying beneath it which supplies much of the ditys water, said Christa Stumpf, environmental planner for Science Applications International Corporation, which has a Boise office.

Limited development would protect the aquifer, she said.

Park planners will return in October with preliminary designs. A final plan will be finished by the end of the year, Moss said.

WASHINGTON - A Colombian drug kingpin who used an armada of 10 commercial freighters to ship 68 tons of cocaine to South Florida and Europe is under arrest, federal drug agents announced Saturday, Authorities described the capture last week of I van De La Vega, 48, by police in Venezuela as cutting off "the head of the snake," and said it was a "major blow" to the Colombian drug trade, which exports an estimated 300 tons of occaine each year.

Over the past three years, De La Vega's ring bought or leased mostly Greek freighters to transport drugs in hidden compartments from the coast of Related story - Colombia to Miami, For Miami, For Lauden of the Colombia of Miami, For Annesterdam authorities said.

Venezuelan authorities arrested De La Vega on Aug. 16 along with Luis Antonio Navia, a Colombian described as a "major investor" who was wanted on prior drug trafficking charges in the United States.

The pair was handed over to U.S. authorities in Miami three days later where they were charged with conspiring to traffic cocaine. They are being held without bond. U.S. authorities waited for Venezuelan police to raid a storage facility with more than four tons of cocaine last week before announcing the arrests.

Another 41 suspects, including rew members of the freighters and Greek organized crime figures have been arrested in several countries, authorities said.

Over a two-year investigation, more than 24 tons of cocaine, worth about $1 billion, were-seized from five ships headed for U.S. and European ports by a Customs, Drug Enforcement Agency, and Coast Guard task force monitoring the deliveries.

United Airlines reaches settlement with pilots

CHICAGO (AP) — United Airlines and its pilots reached a tentative agreement Saturday in a contract dispute that forced the world's largest airline to cancel or delay thousands of fights. The two sides met around-the-clock over the past two days, guided by the National Mediation Board. The key issues remaining in the talks were security and pay.

Pilots began refusing to fly overtime, which they are entitled to do, and that caused chaos with United's already-tight schedule. • In all, 1,486 students first-time CSI students took pre-college level classes during the 1997 cademic year. Nearly 4,800 full-and part-time students were enrolled at CSI in 1997.

• Of these, 874 students were recent high school graduates. The remaining 41 percent, or 612 students, were adults returning to school.

remaining students took other remedial classes.

Of the students who took intermediate algebra or developmental English, half of them advanced to first-year college math and English courses during that same academic year. The students who advanced to college-level courses finished 72 percent of the first-year college credits they took. In all, 87 percent of these credits were completed with grades of C or better.

Students who enroll at CSI first take a placement test to determine whether they have entirelevel college English, math and writing skills. CSI advisers use the results to recommend whether students to recommend whether students should take the pre-college courses. Students can decide to start immediately with college courses, but if they do, they are asked to sign a waiver. "The key is to start them out at a level where we predict they can be successful," said Lynn fons, director of CSI's Academic Development Center that provides a variety of student assistance services, including basic skills classes.

Enrolling students in collegelevel classes without adequate preparation is costly, and it discourages them from sticking with school, said Jerry Beck, CSI's vice president of instruction.

Robin Dodson, chief academic officer for the State Board of Education, said research shows students who are adequately prepared for college classes are more likely to earn a degree. CSI says 32 percent of students surveyed thought the placement test accurately assessed their skills. It's a placement test deelpoed by ACT Inc., known for its college-entrance exams, that old Idaho's poot-secondary schools-are beginning to use.

A goal listed in the State Board oped by ACT Inc., known for its college-entrance exams, that all of Idahe's post-secondary schools-are beginning to use.

A goal listed in the State Board of Education's five-year strategic plan includes reducing the need for these basic skills classes, which bear the interchangeable labels of remedial and developmental education. Before that happens, though, they likely will expand, Dodson said.

Same educators say part of the problem driving the need for remedial and development services for recent high school graduates could be minimum high school graduation requirements that do not prepare students for college. College entrance standards are higher than even heavy adopted state high school graduation standards. It's up to students to prepare themselves for college by taking the more advanced high school courses that exceed minimum graduation requirements.

that exceed minimum graduation requirements.

Eventually, the gap between leaving high school and starting college will need to be addressed as graduation standards evolve, Dodson said.

And information is limited And information is limited nationally, the Institute of Higher Education Policy said in a 1998 report, "College Remediation: What it is. What it costs. What's at stake." The report cltes recent estimates of about $1 billion annually, or less than 1 percent of higher education expenditures. Some educators argue it's well worth the cost, considering that the alternative is unskilled workers.

workers.

"You've got to be educated to succeed in the work force," Dodson said.

Today's work force demands well-trained workers, and often demands several career changes, he said. This sends employees back to college to prepare, and some students need basic classes before they jump into the rigors of college-level courses.

Liberties Union's South Carolina branch to express concern about the "voluntary" prayer before the Batesburg-Leesville game, said LaVerne Neal, executive director of the group.

The Supreme Court's ruling came in a Texas case brought by two families, one Catholic and one Mormon, who challenged a school policy of letting students elect someone to lead the benediction.

The court, which ruled the district's policy of allowing such student-led prayers violated the constitution and you required separation of government, wrote: "Nothing in the Constitution... prohibits any public school student from voluntarily praying at any time before, during or after the school day. But the religious liberty protected by the Constitution is abridged when the state affirmatively sponsors the particular religious practice of prayer."

For Lexington School District 3, which includes Batesburg-Leswille, the key word in allowing prayers was "voluntary." School board members said they believe students stepping up to pray on their own – even over the school's public address system – won't run afoul of the court's ruling.

Algerian officials resign from office

ALGIERS, Algeria (AF) — Wrestling to end a civil insurgency that has killed thousands of people, Algerian President Abdelaziz Bouteflika faced a new challenge Saturday when his 8-month-old government resigned. The president accepted the collective resignation of his Cabinet after meeting with Prime Minister Ahmed Benbitour in the morning. He immediately charged close aide Ali Benflis, who served as justice minister in the early 1990s, with forming a new government.

Benbitour, who has been prime minister insee December 1999, had formed his government by apping into five different political parties.

Gore, Bush lock horns over health care

DES MOINES, Iown (AP) - Presidential rivals Al Gore and George Bush are locking horns over health care, with Gore seeking to build on momentum in the polls and the Bush camp launching its first negative ad of the fall campaign.

Gore, gaining in the polls since his mid-August nominating convention, announced plans for a weeklong focus on health care where aides contend Bush is vulnerable because of "a fundamental difference" because of "a fundamental difference" because of "a fundamental difference because of "a fundamental for the plan, while the Republican National Committee on Monday plans to launch a 57 million TV ad attack on Gore's proposals.

"Gore opposes bipartisan reform," says the RNC ad, which is set to air in mine states. "He's pushing a big-government plan that lets Washington bureaucrats interfere with what your doctor prescribes."

While Bush aides noted the attack spot isn't run by them, the Bush campaign has veto power over RNC ads – which the Texas governor used last week to kill an RNC ad before it aired that questioned Gore's vereacity.

WASHINGTON - Republican presidential nominee George W. Bush and Democratic candidate Al Gore are fiercely debating which tax cut proposal is best for the average American. Who's right?

which tax cut proposal is best for the average American. Who's right?

As usual in matters of the federal tax code, it depends on how much taxpayer earn, whether they have a house or children and what they're doing in life.

The basic difference between the two anyone who pays income taxes now would get money back under Bush's 51.3 trillion plan, while Gore's 500 billion proposal would only kick in for, people engaged in certain activities and below specified income levels. For example, the two proposals would both cut taxes for a couple earning $60,000 a year with two children, but in much different ways and depending on a family's choices, according to calculations produced by the Gore and Bush campaigns.

Under Bush's proposal, this couple would see their income tax rate fall from 15 per 501,000 for each lid! Assuming they tenner cheir deductionsmost most marked their deductionsmost income to $2,050.

most homeowners do to deduct mortgage interest - that amounts to a tax cut of $2,050.

Gore's plan works differently.
Under his example, the married couple takes the standard deduction - which Core would significantly raise - instead of itemizing deductions. They have one older child in college, so they claim ofore's proposed tax credit for tuition and expenses. And they could get $2,000 in government matching funds if they take advantage of tax-free retirement savings accounts Gore is pushing. Total tax cut: $3,025.

The bottom line in this situation is that Bush's plan is much simpler and doesn't require the taxpayer to do anything except earn money, while the benefits of Gore's proposal depend upon taxpayers taking certain actions or dealing with particular needs.

In another example, a single working mother with two kids earning $30,000 a year would get a $1,310 tax cut under Bush's plan. Dropping the 15 percent income tax rate to 10 percent and doubling the per-child credit would essentially remove her from income tax rate to 10 percent and doubling the per-child credit would essentially remove her from income tax rate to 10 percent and the percent income tax rate to 10 percent income tax rouls.

Gore's plan could be smillarly generous, but again only under certain circumstances. The single mother could get a $1,358 tax cut with that assumes she is attending community college to claim the expanded child cac credit and has her kids in doracte that the care of the proposing She would also benefit from a higher earned income tax credit under Gore but would remain on tax rolls.

Except for the proposed increase in the standard deduction for married couples, Gore's tax credits are phased out for tax payers with incomes above $100,000 a year. This holds down the cost of the plan and ensures more money from the projected budget surplus is available for such prioripies as education, paying down public debt and shoring the properties of the plan and ensures more money from the projected budget surplus is available for such prioripies as education, paying Social Security and Medicare.

But targeting the tax rolling and secretain income group allows Bust to claim that Gore's plan would only benefit a portion of all tax payers – and only if they make the right choices.

"The so-called' targeted' tax cut means that some are targeted out of tax relief." Bush said during a campaign swing last week.

Gore, on the other hand, is able to argue that giving an across-the-board reduction in tax rates, as Bush would do, means that 60 percent of the overall Bush tax cut would go to taxpayers with incomes above $92,500 a year -because they pay the greatest share of all income taxes in America.

"I'll fight for middle-class tax

Benefits of tax plans lie in eye of beholder

By Curt Anderson The Associated Presi

WASHINGTON - Republican presidential nominee George W. Bush and Democratic candidate Al Gore are fiercely debating which tax cut proposal is best for the average American. Who's right?

which tax cut proposal is best for the average American. Who's right?

As usual in matters of the federal tax code, it depends. It depends not have a support of the proposal of the proposal mortgage interest - that amounts of a tax cut of $2,050.

Gore's plan works differently.
Under his example, the married couple takes the standard deduction - which Gore would significantly raise - instead of itemizing deductions. They have one older child in college, so they claim of ore's proposed tax credit for tuition and expenses. And they could get $2,000 in government matching funds if they take advantage of tax-free retirement savings accounts Gore is pushing. Total tax cut: $3,025.

The bottom line in this situation is that Bush's plan is much simpler and doesn't require the taxpayer to do anything except earn money, while the benefits of Gore's proposal depend upon tax payers taking certain actions of dealing with particular needs.

In another example, a single working mother with two kids earning $30,000 a year would-get a $1,310 tax cut under Bush's plan. Dropping the 15 percent income tax rate to 10 percent and doubling the per-child credit would essentially remove her from income tax rate to 10 percent and doubling the per-child credit would essentially remove her from income tax mate to 10 percent and doubling the per-child credit would essentially remove her from income tax rolls.

Gore's plan could be similarly generous, but again only under credit of the same same shall be sentially community college to claim the higher education tax credit and has her kids in day care to claim the higher education tax credit and has her kids in day care to claim the higher education tax credit and has her kids in day care to claim the expanded child care credit Gore is proposing. She would also benefit from a higher earned CONTRACT TO SECOND income tax credit under Gore but would remain on tax rolls.

Except for the proposed increase in the standard deduction for married couples, Gore's tax credits are phased out for tax-payers with incomes above $100,000 a year. This holds down the cost of the plan and ensures more money from the projected budget surplus is available for such priorities as education, aying down public debt and shoring up Social Security and Medicare.

But targeting the tax relief almost exclusively at people in a certain income group allows Bush to claim that Gore's plan would only benefit a portion of all tax-payers – and only if they make the right choices.

"The so-called 'targeted' tax cut means that some are targeted out of tax relief," Bush said during campaign swing last week.

Gore, on the other hand, is able to argue that giving an across-the-board reduction in tax rates, as Bush would do, means that 60 percent of the overall Bush tax cut would get pt taxpayers with incomes above $92,500 a year --because they pay the greatest share of all income taxes in America.

11 light for middle-class tax cuts that go to you and your families, that go to the people whe have the hardest time paying the your most one of the strength of the paying the paying the paying the priority placed on them," Core said in a campaign speech last week. "I'll fight for middle-class tax uts that go to you and your fami-last week.

Ultimately, the difference comes down to political philosophy. Bush and the Republicans favor a more straightforward refund of surplus tax revenue to the people who pay it, regardless of their income level or life suction. That has the added attraction of holding down government spending.

The mystery of interspecies communication had generated piles of scientific studies of while the public was generally unaware. Then, Aug. 16, 1996, a toddler fell 18 feet into the moat surrounding the gorilla exhibit a Brookfield Zoo in Chicago and an 8-year-old lowland gorilla named Binti Jua saved his iffe. She kept the other gorillas away, gently cradled the unconscious child and delivered him to her human keepers.

What was going through the gorilla's mind?
A generation ago, the scientific establishment would have insisted that her behavior was instinctive, hard wired, some distortion of the maternal instinct. Animals were automatons, declared the graybeards, and to impose human motives on them was rediculous.

But the stranglehold on science that strict behaviorists held for a half-century seems to be weakening. Animals may not be mindless, even if genetically programmed behavior ensures their survival.

For the first time, 27 of the top scientists representing a host of species gathered in Chicago last week to share data about the culture, intelligence and social compission of primates, elephants, dolphins, killer whales, seals, lions, hyenas and many bird species.

Unprecedented in its scope, the conference – Animal Social Complexity and Intelligence normous – the big journals like Science and Nature published more than a dozen papers last year documenting animal cognition," said professor at Emory University and a leading chimpanze researcher.

To academy director Paul Hellne, a major goal of the conference was toget the researcher together. "There are people who have been working on the same groups of animals for as long as 40 years. This is the first time people are coming to talk about their results, their methods and the future."

The celebrated Swiss researcher Christophe Boesch told of his 21 years with the tool-using chimpanzees of the dank, dark and sweltering Tai forest in the Ivory Coast - they're especially known for using rocks to crack nuts, even though stones are rare. Boesch of late has been studying reproductive strategies, using DNA analysis techniques. Primatologist DeWaal studies how the concepts of morality and justice in human society may have evolved, a subject he has examined in several best-selling books to date. For example, he has specialized in documenting the use of deceit in chimp life.

Cheney and Seyfarth, in collaboration with ethologist Peter Marler, astonished science in tale 1970s by showing that the vervets had an elaborate system of alarm calls that seemed to function like words.
Upon seeing a make, eagle or leopard, a vervet issues the appropriate call and the monkeys protect themselves in different ways.

Scientists: Hidden ocean may exist on Jupiter moon Europa

The fleeting passage of a tiny speccraft near the exotic moon four passage of a tiny speccraft near the exotic moon four passage spieled strong new evidence that an ocean lies hidden beneath its icy crust, enhancing Europa's chance of harboring life, scientists say.

The evidence, from an instrument called a magnetometer, shows that "not only is there the possibility of liquid water, but that it exists today," said geophysicist Krishan Khurana, a member of the research team. The new report, published Friday in the journal Science, is based on measurements made last January when the United States' Galileo spacecraft swooped in close to Europa, a moon which orbits Jupiter. The magnetometer data shows that an electrically-conductive layer of something – most likely salty water – exists there.

The new findings are important because liquid water is considered an absolute prerequisite for the origin and persistence of life, even in microbial form. Studies here on Earth show that life can exist even in the ultrahent, dark, cold, high-pressure environments that exist near environments that exist near volcanic vents on the seafloor.

Russian president gives posthumous honors to sunken sub's crew

MOSCOW - Russian President Vladimir Putin conferred posthu-mous state honors Saturday on the 118 men who died aboard the Kursk,—two-weeks-after-the nuclear submarine sank in an accident that shocked the coun-try.

The Hero of Russia order, one of the country's highest honors, was awarded to the submarine's commander, Capt: Gennady Lyachin. The Order of Courage was awarded to the others, news agencies reported, citing the presidential press service.

Military prosecutors have begun a criminal investigation into allegations that the Kursk collided with an unidentified vessel that later escaped, the Interfax news agency reported Saturday. Citing unidentified sources, Interfax said the prosecutors believe the vessel violated safety rules and was directly responsible for the sinking of the Kursk.

responsible for the sinking of the Kursk.

The cause of the disaster probably won't be known until experts study the shartered submarine more closely to see if it can be raised. Russia is negodiating with Norwegian and Dutch companies to bring up the wreckage.

Many Russians accused the government of being slow to react to the sinking and of bungling rescue efforts. Some observers have said the allegation that a foreign vessel was responsible for the disaster is an attempt to deflect bame away from faults within Russia's poorly maintained and cash-strapped armed forces.

Libya has agreed to pay $1 million for each of the hostages, according to members of the negotiating panel. Negotiators foresaw no snags that might halt the release, and they said they were trying to persuade the rebels to free two other hostages as well.

The Abu Sayyaf, the smaller of two major rebel groups in the southern Philippines, says it is fighting for an independent Islamic state in the region. The government insists the organization is a group of bandits practicing kidnapping and piracy.

Desolate farm hides cocaine operation

UPATA, Venezuela (AP) - For nearly two years, a nondescript abardoned farm house in the remote eastern jungles of Venezuela served as a sanctuary for an international drug gangsunggling Colombian cocaine to Europe and the United States.

Last week, Venezuelan and international anti-drug agents finally outwitted the cartel, sizing a record 10 tons of cocaine and arresting ar least 16 people in an operation that has been a source of pride for a country at odds with the United States over anti-narcoits flights.

Venezuelan officials have lauded the bust, the largest in the South American nation's history, as proof President Hugo Chavez is serious about fighting drugs despite refusing to allow U.S. ahti-drug planes to fly over Yenezuelan territory – a decision that has hurt U.S. anti-narcotics activities in the Caribbean.

- Venezuela is a major trafficking route for Colombian cocaine bound for Europe.

- Authorities are still hunting the bosses of the Los Mellizos flug gang and trying to determine who owned the businesses and ranches that sheltered the ly two years.

"The most difficult part of this investigation is still to come," Col. Jose Antonio Paez, second-in-command of the National Guard's anti drug unit, told reporters on the desolate farm.
"We still don't know who was behind all of this," Paez said, gesturing toward the 5,000-acre farm that has its own airstrip, presumably to receive cocaine from Colombia.

Colombia.

It took an eight-month international investigation, using sophisticated telephone bugging equipment and a network of informers, to find the Doble Uno ranch, nine niles from the nearest city, Puerto Ordaz.

The operation, dubbed Orinoco

2000, resulted in arrests in Venezuela, France and Italy. The U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration helped finance the raids, and Colombia, France, Britain, Tialy, Greece—and Panama also collaborated. The grounds surrounding the rundown farm house show not a trace of the millions of dollars of cocaine that passed through the premises for months. Even the millelong airstrip looks like a dirt road.

The National Guard combed the premises for two weeks before discovering 2.5 tons of cocaine. Wednesday night buried in two six-foot pits deep inside thickets of trees - the latest of three seizures netting the 10 tons of cocaine.

Paez said the National Guard would have never found the latest of the present of the confessions of two freshly nabbed suspected smugglers.

The National Guard capitured the two suspects on a remote river island about 22 miles from the ranch. On that island – in the middle of the Orinoco River – authorities first discovered 5 tons of cocaine last Friday.

State should share wealth with hard-pressed counties

With nard-pressed counties

If Bill Brockman didn't hit on a solution the other day, he certainly identified a problem.

"Doggone it, I'm angry that there are $100 million in state reserves up there in Boise and they can't help us pay for the cost of living," the Twin Falls County commissioner said, as county officials picked over a Spartan 2000-01 budget proposal. "That infuriates one:

You can't blame county officials for feeling like they're living on Baltic Avenue these days. Most Twin Falls County departments are staring at budget cuts – except for the sheriff's department, where cuts are impractical. In fact, the depart ment, where cuts are impractical. In fact, the department, where cuts are impractical. In fact, the department are stablished by the Legislature a few years ago.

more, a 15 percent
ining the jail.

Meanwhile, state government is sitting on Boardwalk. The state is enjoying a budget surplus that has surmate and reportedly is still growing.

There is, of course, a disconnect between the state's fat surplus and the county's close-to-the-bone budget. And as we've said before, if anybody should have first shot at some of that surplus money, it ought to be the taxpayers who put it there.

So the counties can't just run to the

The counties' jail spending doesn't just happen. It reflects the state's justiinst appen. It reflects the state's justified – but not cheap – tough-on-rime stance. That adds up to more prisoners in state lockups, and more inmates in county jails.

The trouble comes when you have to pay up. The counties can increase their budgets by only 3 percent per year, thanks to a legal cap designed to keep property taxes in line.

One idea worth exploring is a statewide criminal costs fund, like the state's capital murder fund established by the Legislature a few years ago. Such an allocation could help hardpressed sheriffs, counties and courts meet the real needs of law and order. It's a matter of fairness, and it's a familiar argument.

Remember a few years back, when an eager freshman U.S. senator went to Washington, D.C., looking to fix this very problem? His crusade against unfunded mandates drew national attention and changed the way a stody federal bureaucracy treats local governments.

Dairy stench can be unbearable I'm compelled to respond to Dean Cromer's letter to the editor in The Times-News on Aug. 17.

11mes-News on Aug. 17.

Mr. Cromer, I hope your conscience is clear and you were free of any conflict of interest when you stated in your letter that hundreds of people need to make up something to gripe about. You are essentially saying all of us are lying. There are several reasons why your statement is false.

People in this area have been co.

• People in this area have been co • People in this area have been co-existing with family dairies for many years without problems or complaints. Why complain now? Obviously the impressive state-of-the-art system doesn't work! Today, five weeks from installation, the "ozonater" doesn't work!

• There are always a few liars living in the midst of the population, but to say hundreds of people can collaborate to lie about the stench you assert "doesn't even exist" is bogus.

say him cut to be seen to you assert "doesn't even exist" is bogus.

We have lives to live, important things to do and projects to complete; we don't have time to make up something in order to gripe.

I lived my childhood in a terrible civil war, so I hate conflict. The only thing I want is to live peacefully in my home and enjoy the simple things in life such as opening the window for fresh air, working in the garden, and enjoying a meal with my family on the deck—without the swarm of flies and invasion of stench from confliend animal feeding operations. The intensity of the stench makes my nostrils and eyes burm, and I start coughing and can't breather. The stench contains hydrogen sulfide, Mr. Cromer, and it destroys olfactory nerves (just like it rots every pipes). Perhaps that is why you can't smell. Maybe you aren't affected because you live 2.5 miles south of the CAFO. You need to learn about "wind rose" in order to understand why it affects people living several miles north on the slope down from the CAFO. Call me, I will be glad to send that information to

Mr. Cromer, do you believe in life after this life? If you do, then you and I should know it doesn't matter how successful and respectable we are in human eyes, the only thing we can take with us is the truth when we face our creator. We can be good actors and fool our fellow man, but T'm sure we can't fool God.

Hansen should be applauded

Hansen should be applauded

I found your Sunday front-page story on LDS politicants to be off base at best. You seemed to scold Rep. Randy Hansen for his personal decision not to run for reelection because he wanted to accept a calling from his church. Then you used this as a transition to criticize other Mormons who enter politics for believing what they do. In fairness, I compliment the reporter for his research in contacting several Mormon politicians and citing Mormon literature. But does the comment from House Speaker Newcomb that Randy Hansen was "one of the best I've ever seen" carry no weight or does his being Mormon overshadow all other issues?

Years ago, I was with Hansen when he issues?

Years ago, I was with Hansen when he accompanied a group of Boy Scouts on a 50-mile hike though the Sawtooth Mountains. He took a week off work to be with his son, Eric, then a scout. This love for family and other personal values have allowed him to blaze new trails in the political world as well. He should not be condemned for leaving his seat in the Legislature for something he believes in. Instead he should be applicated. He was a good politician because he is a good person.

The article says, "By all accounts, Mormons are a political force" and cites the number of Mormon politicians in Idaho as if it is high and should alarm us. Roughly 25 percent of Idaho is Mormon. Roughly 25 percent of our politicians are Mormon (25 of 105, according to the article). There is no evidence of a conspiracy among Mormons to vote for "their kind." Politicians will simply reflect the demographics of the state from which they

Funds should go to environment

A recent Times-News editorial pointed out the growing "surplus" in state rev-enues, but I strongly disagree as to what these funds should be used for. We have some big problems in our beautiful state, and giving a small tax out in personal income tax is not the best use for these funds.

Groundwater is being threatened by rising nitrate levels, we have more than 900 stream and river segments designate dby federal standards, and what do we cargue on whose fault it is. Is it the dairy industry or the cartleman? Are the farmers the problem or are septic systems the caliprit? Is it point source or non-point source? Quit the arguing and do something about the problem!
It is time for our sourcent and levida.

It is time for our governor and legisla-tors to step to the plate and do something about the environment. We don't know if the surplus will continue, so I suggest a three-year funded program to investigate and make corrections. The first step after funding by the Legislature would be to write a request for proposal for an engineering firm to investigate and make recommendations. There are many fine engineering firms in the United States that could make a thorough non-political assessment within a short period of time; six months should be adequate. The results could be priorized, and remedial steps could be quickly implemented, not name-calling, not finger-pointing, but coperative efforts between individuals and our state government to address and fix the problems.

I appeal to The Times-News staff, our radio and television stations, our governor, our progressive legislators, our city and county governments and, last but not least, the citizens of our great state to support this program. There is time for tax cuts when we secure our environ-

Fantastic Indian festival forgotten

Fantastic Indian festival forgotten
Shame, shame on southwestern Idaho journalism. I just returned from the Bannock-Shoshone Indian festival, where I met and visited Randy L. Teton. She is one of Idaho's own native Americans. She was chosen over all other entrants in the United States to represent Sacajawea on the gold dollar. She is the only Idahoan who is now immortalized. Randy is a very beautiful and intelligent woman. She graduated from the University of New Mexico this last spring.

It seems that no one in Twin Falls is aware of that fantastic festival, which takes place each year. Indians from all over the world come to take part in the many events. It is one of the most colorful and beautiful parades of many different tribes from the United States, Mexico, South America and so on.

Why wasn't there any journalists from his past week, we watched as Al Gore and his fellow Democrats delivered and well-orchestrated message at their "Hollywood" (Convenion. For those who missed it, that message was Fm Al Gore (definitely not Bill Clinton), vote for me, I invented our good economy.

for me, I invented our good economy.

If inst blush, there are at least three problems with that message. First, thankfully, the U.S. economy is beyond the intering of one man in the White House (let alone his Naval Observatory-residing sidekick). A decade with a 49 percent increase in the productivity of hard-working Americans is probably a better explanation for recent prosperity. Credit can also be given to the personal computer in the cost of high-powered digital methodogy.

Surely, the historic "budness cycle" played a role as well. It's even possible that the weather and high farm yields helped make America more prosperous— although, oddly enough, record yields benefit everybody but the farmer. Second, a good economy can be ruined if the federal government mismanage; its own fice-old buse.

yields benefit everyoody but the farmer.

Second, a good economy can be ruined if the federal government mismanages its own fiscal house, and this did not happen during the Clinton-Gore years. But the initials A.G. at the bottom of this success story belong to Alan Greenspan, not Al Gore.

It was Greenspan who hawkishly monitored the money supply and harped on both Republicans and Democrats to balance the feeral budget. That budge its now balanced, eight years sooner than the Climm-Gore administration projected possible without directors of the consumption of the consequency for the consumption of the consequency for the consequency for the congress in 40 years. What credit then can Mr. Gore claim for balancing the budget? What credit then can Mr. Gore claim for balancing the budget? The congressman from Tennessee twice voted against a Balanced Badget Amendment. In the last eight years, of the 66 times his administration threatened to veto an appropriations bill, 60 were because the bills spent "too little." So yes, he deserves credit—for being largely unsuccessful with massive new spending proposals. And third, in a nation as large and diverse as America, it is dangerous to speak in overly broad terms of "our good economy." Idaho's Gow. Kempthorne demonstrated a clear understanding of "histoncept when seeking to succeed Republican Phil Bart. He referred to Idaho's "pockets of prosperity," recurrately noting that, in the mids of good times.

many areas remain economically depressed. If Al Gore invented the current prosperity, he would similarly need to claim the many gaps and holes in that invention. In fairness, Republicans also orchestrated a convention where Gov. Bush acknowledged the current good economy, but added his view that "prosperity means little if not allowed to improve the human condition." The Republican message was We also are not Bill Clinton, and while we didn't invent prosperity, we also won't squander it. either

Politicized science is bad science

POILICIZEC

In the state of the state of the state of the state of things scientific. Ye twe recognize the vital role of science in our daily activities. For instance, we would not tolerate a doctor performing untested heart surgery, where the scientific theory underlying the operation had not been reviewed by heart specialists. The science behind genetically altered produce continues to evoke suspicion and protests. Yet when it comes to a law that is potentially the most oppressive in modern times, the Endangered Species Act, we blithely permit unplected, unaccountable federal bureaucrats to utilize a phony form of science politicized science. Politicized science is personal opinion and even outright misrepresentation masquerading in the white coat of the laboratory. In the arena of the Endangered Species Act, self-anomical experts, usually environmental activists, advance a dubious scientific theory as fact, primarily to promote a politice-epivironmental agenda.

primarily to promote a politico-environmental agenda. The so-called fairy shrimp stands out as a prime example of politicized science. Millions of politicized science. Number of these tiny crustaceans thrive in swales, irrigation ditches, and ponds that dot some of the world's most productive farmland in California's Central Valley, Nonetheless, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service designated fairy shrimp as endangered, relying on an incomplete and ill-prepared with an anti-farming, anti-business with an anti-tarming, anti-ousiness agenda.

Through this designation, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has taken control of land-use decisions in much of the region, and farmers and other business people have been severely restricted in the use of their land.

In Oregon and Washington, the National Marine Fisheries Service – ever responsive to the aggressive return-to-the-wild agenda of environmentalists – uses politicized science as a mantra, designating as threat ened only the naturally spawned or wild chimock and coin salmon. In counting the Puget Sound species of chimock salmon, the thriving population of hatchery-spawned chimok salmon, was deliberately excluded.

Masking a politico-environmen-tal agenda behind the good name of science is a certain recipe for destroying businesses and taking private property. We should demand the same high level of scientific theory and practice for matters environmental as we expect for the safety and well-being of our families.

The great Hank Williams understood that: For every hearthreak and hallelujah dirge, he wrote two songs like "Jambaluya." Walk into any mall, roadhouse or retirement home in the American heartland, and you'll hear some version of that song 49 years later. See, country ain't got nothin' to sell but heart, 'cause its soul is mortgaged to the company store. Does anybody still care to shed a tear over "If We Can Make it to Christmas?"
When I was a kid, I got a part-time job as a dishwasher at a cafe next door to a roadhouse that had live music on Friday and Saturday nights. Biologist: Salmon will survive

REDFISH LAKE - Count biologist Dave Cannamela among the optimists who don't believe the threatened salmon will ever go extinct.

But Cannamela, speaking at Saturday's Sawtooth Salmon Celebration at Redfish Lake, is elying on the public, not sci-ence, to intervene with the relying on the public, not science, to intervene with the threatened species.

The event was sponsored by Idaho Rivers United.

"My bet," said Cannamela, "is that because the American people wouldn't allow the gray whale, the bald eagle, the condor (and other species) to go extinct, they won't. allow the salmon to go extinct, either."

Cannamela speaks with some authority. He's a biologist with the Idaho Department of Fish and Game and is regarded as an expert among experts on salmon. And during his lecture, Cannamela predicted the battle over how to restore dwindling salmon in Idaho "will get more painful and ugiler."

On one side, growing public opinion and an assortment of environmental and sports organizations are turning up the heat to breach four Lower Snake River dams, whose construction between 1964 and 1975 paralleled the rapid decline in the number of salmon and threatened their extinction.

On the other side of the debate is a coalitize of the debate is a coalitize of the debate is a coalitize of the extinction.

On the other side of the debate is a coalition of Idaho politicians and business interests that resists breaching the dams and favor continued barging of millions of salmon around the dams plus other remedies over the next few years that they say will spare the salmon from extinction and restore it to bountful numbers.

will spare the salmon from extinction and restore it to bounding months.

But Cannamela used statistics, events and historic trends that tend to bolster the argument that salmon are in peril. He said that in simplest terms, salmon are dying by the millions from ordinary stress as they face unprecedented hurdles - four dams between them and the Padiic Ocean by way of the Columbia River, plus hydredectric dam turbines, dam spillways, slack water areas by the dams that confuse the fish, and the unnatural experience of the past the dams.

cannamela said of all the salmon barged around the dams, only 0.5 percent (half of one per-cent) return as adults to spawn. Of all unbarged salmon, only 0.25 (one fourth of one percent) return. Cannamela said of all the 0.25 (one fourth of one percent) return.

Cannemela offered another comparison: Salmon in the Yakima River of Washington have a return rate of some 2.17 percent, without dams to hurdle. To maintain a stable, healthy salmon population, the return rate needs to be at least two percent. To increase the salmon population, a six percent return rate is necessary, Cannamela explained. Any decision on breaching the Lower Snake River dams has been deferred for another five years while supporters of the Team to head to site of plant shutdown

Shutdown

AHSAHKA (AP) - A state economic development team will visit Clearwater County to address employment problems including the pending shutdown of Potlatch's Corp. Jaype plywood plant near Pierce.

Gov. Dirk Kempthorne made the announcement Friday after dedicating the Dworshak Small Hydropower Plant near Dworshak Dam.

About 215 people will be out of work when the indefinite Jaype closure goes into effect Monday. Many fear it is for good. Potlatch officials cited poor plywood prices. Kempthorne said representatives of various state departments will travel to afflicted areas to consider immediate positive impacts. The governor said there is a strong possibility, for example, some of the out-of-work Jaype employees could go through stepped up training and be hired to help fight fires. The team also could develop job retraining programs.

The Dworshak hydro plant will produce enough electricity for 2,000 homes annually. The plant taps a water line used by the nearby hatcheries to produce a nestimated 23 million-kilowatt hours annually. Burley skate park has long fund-raising road ahead

BURLEY - So far, a proposed skate park has two confirmed donors: the city cof Burley and a punk band called Frenzy.

"I guess we can't complain about not having a skate park if we're not willing to help out," said Leif Heiner, a band member and a 17-year-old Burley High iSchool senior.

iSchool senior.

Heiner and other teen-agers told the city's recreation committee last week they were willing to do anything they could to raise money for the $5.00-square-foot Burley skate park. For Heiner, that means putting on shows with his Paulbased four-man punk rock band.

cob Martindale, 17, also signed up and raising. And although he hasn't been skateboarding long, he said "it was kind of a disappointment" that the skate park hadri been finished by Memorial Day, as planners had hoped.

There aren't many places to skate intown, he said, and the best places with ramps and rails and stairs have signs up prohibiting skateboarding.

Martindale and Helner said they were cited last week; the citation says the teen-agers were skateboarding shere teen agers were skateboarding sign was posted. The teen-agers are contesting the citations.

The citations are pending, said Cassia County sheriff's Capt, Jim Higens.

Heiner's mother, Christine, said she doesn't approve of her son skating where he shouldn't, and told him to stay out of those areas.

The project missed its Memorial Day deadline because the architectural firm that designed the park took longer than anticipated. Now the recreation commit-tee, which met last week, must decide how to raise around $50,000 in cash and in-kind donations.

The park has already budgeted $45,000 this year, and is budgeting another $45,000 for maxt year. But before the project can be put up for bid, the committee needs to know how much will be donated in cash, material and labor.

honor given after 50 years

HILL AIR FORCE BASE. Utah (AP) – Almost 56 years after a daring bombing mission over Germany, retired Lt. Col. Harold M. Hegyessy received the country's second-highest military honor.

The Distinguish Flying Croswas given to Hegyessy Priday during a ceremony at Hill Air Force Base. A paper work error had kept the honor from the former World War II navigator.

"This is a great man who almost died for us, and would have died for us, and would have died for us in the interest of freedom," said Sen. Orin Hardin, R. Utah.

The delay resulted because Hegyessy's papers accompanied him when he went to a hospital to recuperate from his wounds. The paperwork was available for fellow crew members who were comminated for the Distinguished Flying Cross – and they received the honor more than a half-centary ago.

Hegyessy, 82, of PleasaGD Grove, became a navigator on a B-17 bomber and guided many bombing runs over Germany.

Time to liquidate?

The project will also involve realigning Broadway Run on the other side of the highway to line up with the intersection.

A spokesman for St. Luke's said the hospital could not project how much the project would cost at this point because several variables are left to be determined. St. Luke's is footing the bill.

Construction workers plan to work around rush-thour traffic, said Jeff Hull, construction manager for St. Luke's. Construction will not be conducted during peak traffic hours from 7 to 9 a.m. and from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Flaggers will assist with traffic flow between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Hull said he hopes the work is done by the end of September. The country, meanwhile, has adopted a wait-and-see approach to posting signs forbidding jake brakes on roads surrounding the new hospital. The Blaine County Planning and Zoning Commission had suggested St. Luke's representatives than anticipated.

The project will widen the three lanes currently there, add a southbound acceleration lane for those exiting the site, add paved shoulders and replace the temporary signal with a permanent one.

Big fires combine into largest fire group in the nation

HELENA, Mont. (AP) - Wildfires have burned together in southwestern Montana's Bitterroot Valley and along the Continental Divide, forming the nation's largest fire group, a federal official said Saturday.

And elsewhere in the West, potential evacuation plans were ready for two small towns threatened by a blaze in washington.

The Bitterroot Valley fire and the Mussighrod fires in the Big Hole River drainage covered an estimated 247,000 acres, said E. Lynn Burkett of the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise.

"That is the biggest fire complex in the region. It's a lot, and with a fire of that size and magnitude it will take a significant fall weather event to stop it – like rain or snow," she said.

But instead of rain or snow, a "red flag" alert was posted Saturday, warning Montana and surrounding states of scattered dry thunderstorms – with lightning, gusty wind and low humidity – through the weekend as a cold front rolled through, she said.

Both the Bitterroot Valley and Mussighrod fires were started by lightning on July 31. Since then,the Bitterroot fires had destroyed about 70 dwellings.

The Interagency Fire Center on Saturday reported 82 fires nationally on Saturday, most of them in the West. They had spread across 1.5 million acres and more than 13,000 firefighters were assigned to battle them. assigned to battle them.

"Because of their delayin actions, the sales tax has been put in an uncertain position. The county budget now must include $1.5 million in property tax instead of sales tax revenue to pay for the jail construction during the first year."

On the flip side of the flier are names and phone numbers of seven people listened as members of concerned Taxpayers.

It asks property owners to call those filing the suit "and let them know we don't want $1.5 million in additional property taxes this year, just to satisfy their wounded pride."

Rankin said he saw no problem with listing those names and numbers because they could cost taxpayers money next year.

"I'll claim authorship of the flier," Rankin said Friday, adding it was distributed by the North Idaho Conservative Forum citizens group.

He said the county has until Sept. $5 for Concerned Taxpayers to agree not to appeal 1st District Judge Charles Hosack's Aug. 18 ruing. If it does, the county can reduce next year's property taxes by $1.5 million.

Sharon said he did not know if the group would appeal.

Stanger leads A.K.I.

TWIN FALLS - Chuck Koeplin opened the annual A.K.I.

Tournament with a hole in one on No. 6, but it was Murtuugh's Brady Stangare who owned the championship flight lead after Saturday's opening round at Candleridge Golf Course.

Koeplin aced-the par-3, 115-yard hole with a sand wedge, with Chris Meyerhoeffer, Bill Jones and Dick Rees as witnesses. But Stanger's S-under-par-26 on the front nine earned him a share of the spodlight. The first-round leader finished with a 57, one stroke ahead of Terry Spackman and three shots up on Jason Meyerhoeffer, Jim Purves, Matt Smith and Nate Stinson, who all shot 60.

Bob Anderson carded a 60 as well to lead the first flight, two shots ahead of Jim Ochsner and Jim Thompson. Other flight leaders included: Eric Hovey, 63 in the second flight; Roy McDowell, 63 in the third, Mike Bloxham, Larry Eldridge, Phil McCaslin, Mark Saccoman and Dan Willie, who are all tied at 70 in the fourth flight; and Paul Hash, who fired a gross 72 (net 54) for a one-shot advantage in the fifth.

Minico set the tone of the match in Game 1, racing out to a 7-0 lead behind the serving of senior Kirby Gillette, who accounted for three of those points with aces. The Spartans' heavy-hitting front row - especially seniors Lisa Patterson and Lindsay Phillips - took care of the rest, dominating the early net play and leading Minico to an easy 15-5, Game 1 victory.

"Hitting (was the key to the quick starty)," said Minico coach Kelly Fossceco. "Setting the ball up and bitting it, and running some different plays. We had some great swings at the ball."

Though Burley battled back in Games 2 and 3, the Bokeats yielded big runs in each game that ultimately cost them the victory.

Woods from running away with the NEC
Country Club after a birdie-eagle-birdie start. He got stung on his left finger when he tried to remove a wounded wasp on the 15th green. All that mattered at the end of the day was hat 3-under 67, which gave him a nine-stroke lead.
Woods was at 18-under 192, a 54-hole record at Firestone. Hall Sutton had a holeli-none on the 12th hole and nearly-holed out on the 18th for a 65, tho best score of the day. He was at 201, slong with Phillip Price (66) and fast-fading Phil Mickelson (69).
More records are still on the line today. Woods needs a 64 to break the PGA Tour who, won the senior tour's 1994
Transamerica.

Zarley gets past double-hogsy
CONCORD, Mass. - Kermit Zarley shot a Sunder-par 67 on Saturday to take a two stroke lead over Larry Nelson after the second round of the FleetBoston Classic.
Zarley, 58, seeking his second career Senior PGA Tour victory, overcame a double bogey on the second hole with birdies on three of the next four holes. He had an 8under 136 total.

"Thaven't been hitting the ball that well, but my putting has been better," said Zarley, a two-time winner on the PGA Tour who won the senior tour's 1994
Transamerica.

Webb assails record book

EAST LANSING, Mich. – Australia*

LPGA Tour record book, breaking her own mark for 54 holes in the Oldsmobile Classic.

Webb, who matched the LPGA's single round record Friday with an 11-under 61, followed that with a 66 for a 193 total on the Walnut Hills course.

Quinney, Driscoll advance
SPRINGFIELD, N.J. – Jeff Quinney and James Driscoll advanced to the 36-hole final of the 100th U.S. Amateur.
Quinney, 21, of Eugene, Ore., who will be a senior at Arizona State, beat David Eger 3 and 1; and Driscoll, 22, of Brookline, Mass., who just graduated from Virginia, defeated England's Luke Donald 2 and 1 on Baltrusu's Upper Course.

Pack turns back Browns

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) - The Green Bay Packers' defensive starters finally stopped some-body - even if it was only the Cleveland Browns. Green Bay's first-string defense forced its first two punts of the preseason and Bill Schroeder caught two touchdown passes as the Packers held on to beat the Browns 34-33 Saturday night in the NFL's final preseason game. Backup fullback Matt Snider caught a short pass from Danny-Wuerffel and rumbled 66 yards for the go-head touchdown with 5:28 left.

TD pass with 50 seconds left – but Thompson's pass to Northcutt on the two-point conversion attempt was low and wide.

Matt Hasselbeck and Wuerffel each threw two touchdown passes in place of Brett Favre, who watched in shorts and a T-shrit.

Favre, who rested the tendinist in his right elbow for the third straight game, hasn't played since the first two series in Green Bay's preseason opener on Aug. But he is expected to play next week against the New York Jets, keeping alive his NFL-record streak of 125 consecutive starts.

NFL's best might not be early favorite

There are six teams, three in each conference, with, good chances to be in Tampa next January for the Super Bowl. Yet if recent history is any indication, some upstart will suddenly soar to the top, just as Atlanta did in 1938 and Tennessee and St. Louis did last season. That's right, three of the last four Super Bowl contestants were .500 or worse the previous year.

So look at the top-ruted six: the Rams, Redskins and Bucs in the NFC; the Titans, Colts and Jaguars in the AFC. Then look elsewhere - to Baltimore, perhaps, or to Denver. And then wait to see who stays healthy.

Exhibit A, of course, is St. Louis, which improved from 4-12 in 1938 to 13-3 last year and bent the Tennessee Titans 2-16 when Mike Jones stopped Kevin Dyson a yard short of the tying TD on the final play of the Super Bowl.

Exhibit 6 is Indianapolis, 3-13 to 13-3.

Exhibit C includes teams that the final play of the Super Bowl. Exhibit B is Indianapolis, 3-13 to 13-3. Exhibit C includes teams that went the other way, such as Minnesota, San Francisco and Denver. The Vikings fell from 15-1 in 1998 to 10-6 last year and could fall below. 500 with second-year QB Daunte Culpepper, who didn't throw a pass last season, working behind a weakened offensive line. The 49ers, who had missed the playoffs only twice since 1981, started 3-1, but lost 11 of 12 without Steve Young, who was sidelined with a concussion and finally retired. They couldn't make any major of fiscason moves because of salary cap trouble and might get worse before they get better.

might get worse before they get better:
And the Broncos, coming off two straight Super Bowls, stumbled from the start without the retired John Elway. They lost several other stars, including 1998 MVP Terrell Davis, to injuries and finished 6-10. That years that could move upward this year.
Perhaps.
Or perhaps this is the season the leveling effect of the salary cap ends up with all 31 teams somewhere between 97 and 73. The injury factor is related to the cap; no one has depth amany positions. Many stars, both established and rising, already are hart.

established and rising, already are hurt.

* Green Bay quarterback Brett Favre, the NFL's MVP for the 1995-1997 seasons, has tendinitis in his throwing arm. Teammat wide receiver Corey Bradford will miss eight weeks and run ings back Dorsey Levens four. While Favre's backup, Mar Hasselbeck, has looked in exhibitions like a future star, he is 3-for-10 for 41 yards in regular-season action, when the defenses are far more complex.

Patrick Jeffers of Carolina, who finished 1999 with five straight 100-yard receiving games, tore up his knee in an exhibition and is out for the season. So is kicker John Kasny, who broke his kneecap, With Jeffers could go the hopes of the Panthers, one of those teams with the potential to take a great leap forward. They signed Reggie White, who spent a year in retirement, to beef up the defense.

Jacksonville, on the back end of its run at the top of the AFC, has played the exhibition season without any of its starting offers in the same and last week loss Fred Taylor, its starting offers in the same and last week loss Fred Taylor, its starting offers in the same and last week loss Stewart, who went to Detroit. Untested second-year-man Stacey Mack is his backup,

The New Orleans Saints, who cleaned house after three wins under Mike Ditka last season, lost three starters in the exhibition opener. That's a damper on a team with modest hopes of doubling its win total.

The Rams, with Mike Martz replacing the retired Dick Vermeil as head coach, have the usual post-Super Bowl cap problems.

replacing the retired Dick Vermeil as head coach, have the usual post-Super Bowl cap problems.

For $46.5 million, they resigned Kurt Warner, the exarena League and NFL Europe QB who was MVP in the regular season and Super Bowl. Then they extended the contract of Isaac Bruce, their star receiver. But they're still trying to figure out how to pay defensive end Kevin Carter, and All-Pro, and remain under the cap. Carter, for his part, is annoyed that the Rams can't figure out how to get him his cash, too.

"I've got plenty of money," Carter says. "I just want to be treated like one of the best defensive players in the league." Egos and money belong in Washington, where Daniel Snyder, the 35-year-old owner, shelled out afround $100 million for aging supersurs like Deion Sanders and Bruce Smith, paying for part of it by making the Skins the first team to charge fans to watch training camp.

On paper, the Redskins look like the favorites, but on the field and in the locker room, things might be different.

Who knows what will develop from the potentially wast will develop from the potentially such sanders, new backupt quaerback Jeff George and holdovers, such as Michael Westbrook. Oach Nort Turner might have to go unbeaten to avoid the ire of Snyder, who brought in Ray Rhodes, the ex-Philadelphia and Green Bay coach, as defensive coordinator and, some think, coach-in-waiting.

Francisco's first two opening drives.

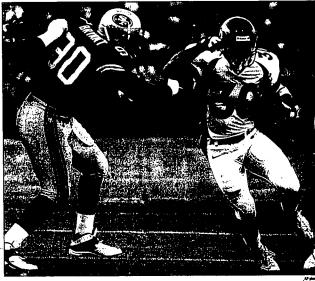

Davis, who had just one carry as long as 11 yards through three games, took three handoffs in a row on Denver's first drive. He took the ball 11, 13 and 8 yards, the final burst a can't-touch-me touchdown.

Griese tossed two passes, completed them for 25 yards, watched Davis run three times and sat down. The whole first-team offense sat down, and there were 11 minutes left in the first quarter.

The first-team defense ended on a positive note, too. Denver hassled quarterback Jeff Garcia trying to become the Bay Area's favorite Garcia since Jerry into a 3-for-7 night. In four drives, San Francisco could muster just three points and two first downs. One came on a holding penalty called on Denver pornerback Ray Crockett, the other on a jitterbugging 27-yard run by running back Charlie Garner. The first-team defense ended Denver's Terrell Davis evades San Francisco's Junior Bryant for a first-quarter touchdown at 3Com Park Friday.

But the best news for Denver is that Davis, coming off major knee surgery last fall, seemed to grow stronger as the preseason unfolded. He finished the pre-season with 23 carries for 115 yards.

"What I have to show to these going to show up every Sunday and play for them," Davis said.

"I wanted to come out of the pre-season with this type of feeling." Here's what you need to know about the rest of the game: San Francisco punter Chad Stanley downed his own punt in the Denver running back Olandis

The Broncos finished the preseason 4-0, the second time in 41 seasons the team has finished the preseason undefeated.

Filer goes mental

New approach to coaching has Wildcats ready

FILER - Call it kooky. Call it new age. Call it the Zen traffic school of volleyball..

But the one thing that Filer volleyball coach Ed Richards' new approach to teaching mental focus can't be called is negative.

"Last year our conference record was 10-0 going into the district playoffs and then we just fell apart," Richards said. "Physically, this is as good a team as either of the state champions I have coached. We just need to work on our mental game."

A summer coaching clinic gave Richards the idea to shake things up at practice with some non-traditional activities, and after spending about 15 minutes a day on the mental side of competition the results have been positive.

"(Saying) Green light' is a real quick reminder that you have to keep playing and you can't let yourself down," Allen said.

Giving the green light and warming up with Tai-Bo isn't something that only the players do. Richards expects his athletes to remind him if he starts to lose his focus or become frustrated. And he punches and kicks along, side them in practice.

"The coad his part of the team," Richards said. "I can't be negative have to say is 'Green light." Whether that is in a same or at practice, it will help me."

The one thing that Lassen could work on, Richards said, is her aggressiveness. In the past, she hasn't been very vocal and her quiet and unassumid demeanor off the court doesn't lend itself to a killer volleyball instinct.

"I am trying to talk all the time," Lassen said "Even though I don't always succeed, I'm doing better than usual."

Mentally, the Wilcats are better than usual as well. And coming into the season, they are definitely in fighting shape.

But whether they're ready to rumble on the gym floor remains to be seen.

MYSTERY CONFERENCE

SCIC volleyball is up for grabs

As usual, Wood River and Filer are expected to be strong contenders for the title. But both teams have some big shoes to fill.

"We are doing pretty good so far," Wood River coach Reamy Goodwin said. "We lost a good player, but we are doing fine."

Defensive end breaks down gender barrier

CHICAGO - Adrianna Delhotal may have felt like a pioneer when she took her position at defensive end for Elgin's freshman football team Saturday in Arlington Heights, a Chicago suburb. But she is just waging a batle in a war that was decided decades ago in her favor.

Elgin High School belongs to the northwest suburban Upsate Eight Conference, which sati shas a rule foreidding both of gifts and the state of the pione of th

Barbara Burr of the National Women's Law Center in Washington said federal law does not necessarily require school districts to include girls on boys teams when it comes to contact sports such as football. She added that school districts must demaine if there is enough interest to sustain a girls team in such contact sports.

mine it there is enough interest to sustain a girls team in such contact sports.

"If there is no female football team, a girl would have to be allowed to play boys football," said Young High School Athleid. Director Sue Franklin, who grew up in the era of Title IX and is familiar with the gender-equity legislation. "I cannot believe in this day and age that someone could even have a rule like that. The Elgin freshman and her parents hope to bring the conference's thinking into the 21st Century.

Change may be coming soon, according to Principal Renate Matthaeus of Larkin High School in Elgin, a member of the Upstate Eight's ruling board of control.

"If that rule is in violation of Title IX, I don't see how we can keep it," said Matthaeus, a 1960 graduate of Steinmetz on Chicago's Northwest Side who played volleyball and softball in park district leagues because her high school didn't have girls teams. "If there is someone who feels that football is her sport, she should have the opportunity to play."

Principals of the Upstate Eight's 10 member schools will meet on Sept. 13 to discuss rescinding the rule. The conference's athletic directors will meet to Republic on the matter that will be presented to the board.

Delhotal is hoping for a quick rule change that will allow her to play in the Sept. 9 conference opener against Streamwood.

"It's not fair, and I'm mad about that rule," said the Scioti-inch, 170-pound Delhotal. "I like the sport, it's fun, and like any other person who goes out-for football, I'm learning self-discipline and how to treat others right."

enthusiasm to U.S. team

The mere thought of taking part in the world's greatest sports spec-tacle is enough to leave Kara Wolters shivering with anticipa-tion.

tacle is enough to leave Kara Wolters shivering with anticipation. Wolters shivering with anticipation. Wolters is one of six members of the U.S. women's basketball team who'll be playing in the Olympics for the first time. They're added a new wave of enthusiasm and some valuable skills on the court. "They're fungry," U.S. coach Nell Fortner said. "They're brought a hunger and that's important."

The first-timers have pumped the veterans for information. They want to know what it's like to march in the opening cermony and to play on a world stage. They asked Teresa Edwards, who'll be playing in her fifth Olympics, what it's like to stand on the awards platform with a gold medal draped around your neck.

"She said it was like a drug," Wolters said. "You just want more and more. That's why she keeps

Williams siblings poised to meet in final

Williams siblings po

NEW YORK (AP) - From the time they were little girls. Venus and Serena Williams believed they would play each other for the U.S. Open title. Now, perhaps, that time has come.
Papa Richard Williams, who danced so delightedly on the broadcast booth roof when Venus won Wimbledon last month, just might kick up his heels again in two weeks if his daughters set up the all-in-the-family final he hanticpated since their birth.
Serena, the defending champion, and Venus certainly could make it happen.
"I'm ready for the traffic and I'm ready for the city and I'm ready for a night match on Monday," Venus said.
For the first time in their professional careers, they are going into a Grand Slam tournament as the favorites and, thanks to a bit of luck, on opposite sides of the draw.
The seedings for the women don't really reflect the pecking order in the game or the expected outcome of this $15 million U.S. Open, which begins Monday.
Venus is No. 3 behind top-seeded Martina Hingis and No. 2 Lindsay Davenport, and Serena is miscas s No. 5.

By following the WTA Tou rankings as usual for the seed-as No. 5.

By following the WTA Tour rankings as usual for the seedings, the U.S. Open did not take into account how thoroughly the Williams sisters have dominated this summer and how they have blossomed since coming back in the spring from long absences due to injuries.

Between them, they won four tournaments in a row - three by Venus - before Serena took a cautious exit with a foot injury in the final of the du Maurier Open in Montreal last Sunday. Venus then won her fourth consecutive tournament and 19th straight match, beating Monica Seles in New Haven on Saturday to take the Pilot Pen title.

The doctor's diagnosis was seamoiditis - an inflammation of a small bone on the base of her left foot. If that injury doesn't flare up again, Serena should be as dangerous as she was the previous week when she beat Hingis and Davenport to take a tour title in Manhartam Beach, Calif.

The Williams sisters are the fastest, strongest, toughest, most feared women at the moment on quick hardcourts like those at the National Tennis Center. They have overcome the inconsistency they once showed, and the-tendencies to rush through points and waste opportunities.

The turning point for 20-year-old Venus might have come when he took most of six months off to let the tendinitis in her wrists calm down. She came back thinner in the shoulders from a loss of muscle because of her idleness, but she had a new attitude on the court.

"I felt that tennis was a lot ... simpler than I was making it out to be," she said. "In reality, tennis is not too complex. There's some strategy, and in my case, a lot of power."

Boasting the fastest serve in women's tennis at 123 mph, Venus overpowered Davenport to win Wimbledon, beat Davenport again two weeks later in Stanford, Callif, and then won in San Diego, beating Monica Seles in the final.

Drought spurs demand for feed, forcing ranchers to cull herds early

TWIN FALLS - The dry, hot weather fueling the vast wildfires to the north is likely to push play prices for local ranchers.

Because to the lack of water high-altitude range land Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management officials are telling cattlemen using public for their summer and autumn pasture to take their cattle home about two weeks early.

take their cattle home about two weeks early.
As a result, ranchers have started selling off their cull cattle early or scrambling to find enough feed to get them through the winter.
Walter Lovingfoss, who leased the Lake Creek allotment near Sublett for his cattle, said he had to take one portion of his herd off the allotment on Aug. 14. The remainder will have to come off the allotment on Aug. 14. The remainder will have to come off by Sept. 1. And with similar drought conditions prevailing throughout much of the country, hay prices are almost certain to go up. That in turn could force ranchers to start selling off their herd to avoid high feed bills – possibly forcing a dip in beef prices. Lovingfoss normally waits until the November to begin culling his herd.

"I'm doing it early because I don't want to feed those cows any longer than 1 have to," he said. Pete Peterson, U.S. Forest Service manager for the Burley and Twin Falls ranger districts, said cattle must come off the range an average of two weeks early depending on the allot-early depending on the allotment.

And fires too, are forcing many ranchers off of public land. This is a disturbing situation for ranchers since federal grazing policy says public range land burned by wildfires cannot be grazed for two growing seasons afterward.

Wilson Gray, an agricultural economist with the University of Idaho's extension office in Twin Falls, said the situation will definitely be a seller's market.

"It's going to be a good market if you have hay to sell, but it's going to be mad if you have to buy," Gray said.

However, he said effects on the beef market will likely be minimal and temporary. Beef is one of the few bright spots in the agricultural commodities market right now.

Lovingfoss agreed.
"I think what's going to happen is that there's going to happen is that there's going to be a bunch of cattle dumped on the market early and that's going to certainly hurt the price, but there's probably going to be a demand for cows in the early spring," Lovingfoss said. "That's why I'd rather buy hay and feed the good cows that I've got rather than sell them in the fall and try to buy them back."

If drought conditions continue, next year the situation is likely to be worse, Gray said.

Discount clubs appeal to uninsured

NEW YORK - A rise in the umber of uninsured and out-of-NEW YORK - number of uninsured and out-of-pocket medical expenses has spurred several companies to form discount clubs that offer savings on prescription drugs, doctor visits and other medical

The clubs are aimed at the 44 million uninsured Americans and consumers whose health insurance lacks prescription drug and dental coverage, and other benefits.

But while consumer advocates say the discounts are better than nothing, they-caution that membership in a club is not insurance coverage, does nothing to protect against the cost of catastrophic illness and does little to reduce the national problem of rising health costs and growing number of uninsured.

That's when the newest Malone Outlitters store is scheduled to open in the new section of the Factory Stores outlet mall at Kimball's Junction near Park City.

that will add 100,000 square feet of new space and a variety of new stores. One of them will be the 5,200-square-foot Malone Outflitters, the 11th in the chain but the first in Utah.

"We're slating a grand opening around Thanksgiving, but we hope to have the doors open around Thanksgiving, but we hope to have the doors open around mid-November," said Thayne Fisher, vice president of development and operations for Malone Properties, based in Meridian, Idaho.

Fisher said the store will focus on gear for fishing, hunting that no guns)' camping and outdoor clothing and footwear.

Although the store will carry a variety of brand names, including American Camper, Zebco, Quantum, Martin, Browning, Igloo, Woolridge, Field &Stream and other manufacturers of outdoor equipment, the company last a special, factory-direct relationship with Brunswick Corp. whose goods comprise about half of the product mix in the Malone Outflitters stores.

"We have a five-year agreement with Brunswick in which we have access to their discontinued, obsolete and remanufactured goods plus we can sell all of their front-line goods, "said Fisher.

Factory stores specialize in such goods, which is how they are able to avoid the traditional "no competition" agreements between wholesalers and retail-ies. Fisher noted that a remanufactured fishing rod or reel carries the same factory warranty as new ones but costs significantly less.

new ones but costs significantly less.

It's a concept that seem to be working for Malone. He opened his first Malone Doutfitters in November 1998, and the Utah store will be the eleventh. Other locations, also in factory outlet centers, are in Boise and Nampa, Idaho, Bend, Orea Casa Grande, Ariz, Dalton, Ga., Gonzales, La; Lancaster, Pa., Borth Branch, Minn.; Pigeon Forge, Tenn.; and Williamsburg, Iowa.

"Karl provides a unique opportunity, He's the owner of the company, and we leverage his name." And will continue too, although not at the current pace of a new store store every few months. "We expect to open a couple of a new store in 2001, and then we'll go from there. But we do intend to continue to grow," said Fisher.

TWIN FALLS - Culligan International Co. announced that Rick Home of Twin Fed Culligan has received the com-pany's prestigious Cultivator Award.

To loome a Cultivator Award winner, a dealer must be one of Culligan's top market business divisions – household, commercial, bottled water, and drinking water. Each year, Culligan gives the award to 60 of its 800-plus dealers.

"We're extremely proud of our award recipients. These men and women are exemplary members of not only their local communities but also the Culligan dealer network," said Greg Norgaard, executive vice president of Culligan.

Tight market allows initiative with resumes

Karla Hester's resume resembles arts and crafts projects more than serious business documents.

She sent a pizzabox resume to a pizza corporation, a Popsicle-stick house (with her resume as the blueprint) to real-estate companies and a milk carton with her photo on it to alert one company about its "missing" worker.

"I would apply for jobs that I knew I wasn't going to get – like vice president of marketing," she said. "But I usually at least got an interview and could also talk to them about other positions that maybe I was qualified for."

In fields that rely on creativity—such as sales and marketing—out-of-the-ordinary resumes can be highly effective, career consultants say.

She submitted her pizza resume for the national Parterprise contest, which netted her a $1,000 prize and an inview for a management trainee position with the car rental company.

Heath has been farming in the Castleford area for almost 20 years and has been transitioning to organic production for almost that long. organic produce as a way to stay in business.

The organic industry has exploded from 11 growers and 757 acres certified organic in 1990 to 178 growers and 81,323 acres in 1999. Over 30,000 acres of organic production were added from 1998 to 1999. Growers as less jumped from $4,131,000 to $5,722,000 just last year.

That growth has been fueled, in part, by conventional farmers looking for a way to improve their bottom line. Nate Jones, president of the Idaho Organic Producers Association, sees that trend in the King Hill area.

Specialty potatoes bite

Specialty potatoes bite into traditional market
KIMBERLY - Russets dominate the American consumer's plate, but more and more brightly hued tubers are finding heir way to the table.
Although the so-called specialty potatoes accounted for just 1 percent of the fresh potato consumption in the United States in 1999, it's the fastest growing segment of the market. The category, led by the popularity of yellow-fleshed potatoes, increased by over 40 percent over 1998.

Clinton's program to improve bank access for poor disappoints

A Clinton administration program designed to prod banks into offering no-frills accounts to the poor has signed up just 700 people nationwide during its first year of operation, a disappointingly slow start to those who hoped the program would rescue families from high-cost-check-casher. The federally subsidized Electronic Transfer Accounts were supposed to draw about 6 million low-income Americans into the mainstream financial industry by paying U.S. banks $12.60 for each new participant they attracted.

But a year after the much hyped accounts were introduced, only one major U.S. bank - Wells Fargo – has begun offering them, and only in certain states.

With just 700 accounts nationwide, the federal program serves fewer low-income families than a single check-cathing outlet in South-Central Los Angeles, or about one-tenth of 1 percent of its potential market.

Bankers have been slow to embrace ETAs because they fear the accounts will be unprofitable and risky, despite the federal subsidy. For one thing, banks are required to accept applicants even if they have bounced checks at other institutions – a requirement the banks say leaves them vulnerable to fraud. But consumer advocates say the low numbers are proof that traditional banks don't want to serve the poor and that voluntary programs such as the ETA don't work.

"This thing is a complete failure," said Ed Mierzwinski, consumer program director at U.S.

Public Interest Research Group.
"The idea of paying banks a $12.50 bribe to open affordable accounts clearly isn't working."
Inner-city leaders say ETAs were ill-conceived from the start, placing too many restrictions on the accounts and relying too heavily on traditional banks, who have been steadily moving out of low-income neighborhoods.
"Who has the infrastructure and offices in morphoses? It's the government's original goal in creating the ETAs was to save postage costs from mailing government becks.

"The benefit to the government is clear," he said, "The benefit to consumers is not so clear."

Women prove better investors than men

MIAMI – Wall Street, what took ou so long to notice? Women are better investors an men.

you so long to notice?

Women are better investors than men.
Of course, female superiority extends far beyond Wall Street, but now we have some numbers to toss into our sexist statements. Like we needed them.
From the University of California at Davis, Assistant Professor of Finance Terrance Odean and Associate Professor of Finance Brad Barber studied the Investment results of 35,000 households from 1991 through 1997. Manmanged portfolios earned risk, that are 14 percent less a year than those earned by women. Why? The professors cite other academic studies that say men are prone to something called investor overconfidence. "Bet you've never seen a guy swagger," Odean joked in June.

Swageer right into and out of overcontinuates seen a guy swagger," Odean joked in June.

Swagger right into and out of stocks far too often, apparently. Odean and Barber's study says the major fault of men – let's limit this to faults as investors – is that they buy and sell stocks much more often than women.
Trading a lot hurts anyone's bottom line.

Trading a lot hurts anyone's bot-tom line. Odean and Barber's research shows men buy and sell stocks at a rate that's 45 percent higher per year than women. Single men, the worst of all, trade 67 percent more than single women. Why are men compelled to change stocks as fast as channels with the TV remote?

"Men are probably looking for a quick buck. Women are looking for the future," says Don Witom-ski, who has been active in South Florida investment clubs since

"Equity returns come in lumps," he said. "If the market is good, it's very, very good. And if it's not good, it's either mediocre good, it's verry, very good. And it's not good, it's either mediore or bad."

Because the good comes in lumps, investors who miss even a short period miss a large part of the good returns. The market passes them by in a flash.

That's probably not a surprise to anyone invested in tech stocks in March or April.

But it's also a long-term market fact – and one that has nothing to do with gender. Ibbuston research shows that a dollar invested in stocks at year-end 1979 grew to $26.82 by year-end 1999. However, if during those 20 years, the investor for some reason took the dollar out of the market during the 15 best months for stocks, it would have grown only to $6.81.

The same sort of dismal comparison holds true if you do the numbers from 1929 through 1999. Move in and out, Ibbotson data shows, and you get hurt.

Clearly, excessive trading is gender-neutral. It hurts all investors. Odean and Barber's research shows that, too.

Odean notes that their study took place in good marker years, so most people made money. But they could have made even more by sitting still than by doing a lot of trading.

To decipher this, Odean and Barber looked at each household's portfolio at the start of each year. For comparison purposes, they calculated what each household's return would have been minus commission, if therehad been no trading at all.

Of course, most people don't sit still. So Odean and Barber compared the portfolio a trual return to what would have happened if there had been no trading.

On average, women's portfolios parea the portrono's actual return to what would have happened if there had been no trading.

On average, women's portfolios underperformed their own, buy-and-hold benchmarks by 1.7 percentage points per year. Men underperformed buy-and-hold by 2.7 percentage points a year. "It's like changing lanes all the time and finding out at the end you had to pay a price for each time," O'dean said.

Patience is difficult to master in turbulent markets.

"Finance is still seen as a male domain," O'dean said in June: "But the world is changing. It could be that 10 years from now, men and women are both trading too much."

Ruddy, who has a bachelor's degree in economics and is achartered property casualty insurance underwriter, says she began seeing the trend in 1998 "when the economy went sky high and employees suddenly were in the driver's seat. Restless nights can be par for the course after you hit 50.

One in two men over the age of fifty suffer from an enlarged prostate or benign prostatic hyperplasia (BPH). It's not a life threatening disease, but it does threaten quality of life.

If you find yourself waking several times during the night to relieve yourself, have difficulty urinating, or have the feeling that your bladder never completely empties, you may have an enlarged prostate.

Now there is an innovative new outpatient treatment called TUNA (TransUrethral Needle Ablation) which takes less than an hour, requires only minimal anesthesia and allows you to return to your normal activities within 24 hours.

Fed decision to hold interest rates steady gets little reaction

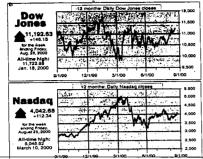

NEW YORK (AP) - Wall Street got a long hoped-for reprieve this past week. After months of specuration about the Federal Reserve's next move, the central Reserve's next move, the central Benezve's next move, the central serice June 1999.

But the reprieve - at least until November, thanks to the presidential election - wasn't greeted with a rally on Wall Street. Instead, the market spent the week searching for a direction, and while the Dow Jones Industrial rose 148 points for the week, stocks were generally mixed.

Wall Street's muted response might be hard to understand. Is the quiet a sign of less confidence in the markets or a lack of conviction by investors unsure where to put their money?

Or perhaps investors are just on vacation and paying less attention to the market?

the long run, the market's performance doesn't mean much

Market speculation leading up to Tuesday's Fed announcement made the central bank's decision a non-event, according to Jim Melcher, president of Balestra Capital Management in New York. Economic data in the preceding weeks pointed to a cooling down of the economy, so the decision was not a suprise, he said.

"It was not a big event because it was pretry much what every-body expected, so there was little reaction," Melcher said. "For one thing, it's boring. People are getting tired of this. It's the summer doldrums. I think the market will continue to move sideways for a while."

Sung Won Sohn, chief economic Control of the contr

while."
Sung Won Sohn, chief economist for San Francisco-based Wells Fargo, believes the flatness in the market reflects investors' uncertainty-about-the-marketis direction. He said investors are ings, rather than interest rates. After several years of putting their money into Internet darlings with only long-term hopes of profits, investors are being much more choosy, he said.

Sohn also belleves that the years where a single sector - like technology or energy - led the stock market may be over.

"The breadth of the market is increasing ... more and more stocks are participating in periodic rallies, whereas last year, there was just a handful of tech stocks that skyrocketed, leaving the rest of the dust," he said. "This broadening of the market rally is an encouraging sign and ... frankly, I like today's market a lot better than last year's market."

Other analysts believe that the market's lukewarm reaction to the Eed has more to do with the fact that the stellar double-digit returns on Wall Street avoper in

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

Dear Mr. Wolff

Dear Mr. Wolff.
At duplicate, we play 15-17 HCP no-trumps. Was this hand worth a boost to two after partner opened one no-trump? I held $\timeq$ Q-J-7, $\times$ K-8-5, $\times$ 9-8-7-6-4, $\times$ Q-7.
Borderline, Santa Ans. Calif.

ANSWER: This is a close decision, and most would pass. Had your diamond suit included one of the honors held in the other miles. your diamond suit included one of the honors held in the other suits, the invitational raise would have more appeal. Even if opener has a maximum, your combined total is only 25 HCP.

Dear Mr. Wolff:
Both sides were vulnerable at duplicate, and I held & A.K.Q-7.2, % 8, $ A.K-9.5, $ K.8-2.1 dealt and opened one spade, and LHO overcalled two hearts. After two passes, I bid three diamonds, raised to four by partner. Should I have gone on?

ANSWER: You made your first mistake when you bid three diamonds instead of choosing the more flexible double. After all, partner may have been walting for a reopening double so be could pass for penalties. Lacking the double, after partner raises to four diamonds, you should bid again. You might suggest a spade game, but be satisfied with a diamond game if partner bids five diamonds.

Dear Mr. Wolff:
At duplicate, I held $ 8-7, $\Psi A.Q.J-8-7-2, $ Q-9-6-5, $ J.
Partner opened one spade and I responded two hearts. When partner rebid three clubs, should I have rebid three hearts or introduced diseased: duced diamonds

ANSWER: The consensus choice ANSWER: The consensus choice would be three hearts. Why not rebid an excellent six-card major instead of introducing an anemic diamond suit? A preference to three spades would not be a good choice.

Dear Mr. Wolff:
With a partscore of 90 points, I open one heart with A A-J-7, K-Q-10-86, 6 Q-10-9-7-2, A -Partner responds two diamonds, I and I raise to three diamonds. If the bids three hearts, should I quit, or are slam chances alive?
Sull Breathing, Memphis, Ton.

ANSWER: Partscores often in-terfere with accurate slam bld-ding, and your deal is no excep-tion. Yes, you should bid again. Had partner not been interested in "bigger things," he could easily have passed three diamonds. Bid three spades and see what devel ops.

Dear Mr. Wolff:
At duplicate, RHO opens one diamond and LHO responds one spade. With favorable valuerable typ partner jumps to three clubs (weak) and RHO bids three spades. Should I bid four clubs with ♣ Q-7-2, ♥ 10-7-5-3, ♦ A-K, ♣ 10-98-7?

Buggesting Sacrifice, Madison, Wia.

ANSWER: Yes, I would approve of a boost to four clubs. Your chances of defeating a three-spade contract are not good, and four clubs, if doubled, may not cost too much. If the opponents bid four spades, there should be excellent chances to set it.
